The Medical Assistant that did the tour in the video should be proud of herself as she has accomplished great things for only being there for four months. She has her own office, she moved from working with three different doctors to being under just one, and she has been there longer than her probation period which not many people even make it past the thirty days. She seems like in the video that she is incredibly happy where she is at with her work life now.

The one thing that I did notice that I thought was off in the video was when she was showing us around, she went into the medicine cabinets and they were already unlocked? Maybe it was because there was not any narcotics in them, but I always thought any cabinets with any medicines had to be kept locked. I might have just not seen her unlock the cabinets before she showed us or maybe they are in a locked room therefore they do not lock the cabinets.
