I am a transfer from Newberry College. Fall of 2019 was my first semester here at Benedict College. Ever since attending this school, I would have to say that all my major classes, Sports Management, has been my favorite classes and are the classes where I receive the highest grades. Psychology is the class that I have received the worst grade.

I really do not like to study unless I know I must. I did do better with taking notes in face-to-face classes than I do with virtual classes. I am good at test-taking. I usually sit in the front to middle of the classroom mostly because my football coach makes me. I can work in either groups or being alone.

My GPA is currently a 2.6. Last Spring, I did my best I have ever did in college and made a 3.0. That is why I like online classes more. I feel like I can move at my own pace. I am not happy with my GPA, but I am trying my hardest to keep it going up. I perform way better on tests than papers. I could stay on top of my work and not procrastinate, that would help me way more with keeping my grades and a good standard. I do tend to struggle to concentrate if I do not tell myself to focus in. I prefer to study on my own, never had a tutor but I do have study partners in each of my classes. I really do not review my tests and papers, but I do keep them to review at midterm or on the final exam.
