

Chapter 1 Module 2

For intellectual courage, from my personal experience I have had a lot of people disagree with me on my belief of giving children tracking shots. A lot of my family and friends believe that is wrong, but If you think about what is going on in our black community with children being kidnap left and right. My family and friends believe that giving a baby a tracking shot is wrong but like I pointed out in the news of our black women and men being kidnapped left and right by human trafficking or organ trafficking. The crazy part is mostly be our black women that's getting kidnapped left and right. When I was younger, I had a cousin who was kidnapped by some human trafficking so every time since then I just wonder what if she could have been saved if she had a tracker placed her.

For open mindedness, from my experience I have never dealt with gay people not that I had a problem with them I just never hang or really talked to them. My second brother had talked to me one day and he came out. He told me he was gay now as I am staring at him, I just couldn't wrap my head around it. He explained that yes it goes against the bible or whatever, but didn't God give us the chance to be with whoever we want and love who ever we want to.

So since then I have been open minded towards gay and really have some cool associate's that are gay.

For intellectual honesty, Politics, I don't believe in any form of the government mostly anything coming out of Trumps mouth. From my viewpoint since Trump was voted into the white house, he has done nothing expect lie to the people and hid behind the little power he holds. For those who keep supporting Trump with all the proof stacked against him isn't to bright. This is just my honest opinion on the whole matter, and this doesn't mean I'm wrong it's just how I feel on the matter concerning him and the government. I can't agree with people who believes Trump is the best thing to happen to us since everything he has done since being in the white house if mess it up.

For intellectual perseverance, every challenge I have had to deal with college was my strongest challenge yet. At first when I left high school, I wasn't not planning on go to college until I got bored being home. I first went to midlands tech I was like ok I got this, but still didn't have the drive to get it done. Then I transferred to benedict college and ever since my freshman year I had to push my self to get where I'm at right now. I came to understand why I came to college at first it was just for the fun and to kill time but as time went on, I wanted to reach new levels of my knowledge. There is so much more to learn out here things that I never knew or things I did know but more is added on which is basically building on to the knowledge I have already.