I know for sure that I would use methods like the Shoutouts, setting goals one week at a time and having them work together towards a reward. Giving shoutouts to students lets them know that your watching them and gives them something to work for. Setting goals every week I believe gives students motivation to complete assignments. With Setting goals every week, you can add prizes to the end of the week for a reward. Small things like this make a classroom more of learning environment with a fun twist.
