

Covid-19 is a one of the popular political situations currently happening in Trump's presidency. Covid-19 is coronavirus disease that is said to affect mainly older people who have severe underlying medical conditions, like diabetes, lung or heart disease. But it can also affect others who have been exposed to it. The deadly virus pandemic represents a profound threat to health, economic stability globally. A lot of people quit their jobs and most children complete school at home via electronics. In Trump's response he issued free testing almost everywhere. He stopped traveling from China to attempt to decrease to the U.S as long as possible. He also developed a vaccine for the virus.

As for Machiavellis, I believe that he would handle the situation the same as Trump is handling it. I believe Machiavelli would've tried to keep his people away from each other and had stores closed as long as possible no matter the feelings and different thoughts of everyone else. I think Trump is the definition of Machiavelli's good politician. Trump is friendly, he lies and at some point he knows how to defend. Not everyone like him but some appreciate what he does to serve and protect his people.
