Kori Latimore
Solid Hazard Waste
September 13, 2020
Dr. Darko

1. What are the major classifications of solid wastes?

- Domestic/Residential Waste: This category of waste comprises the solid wastes that originate from single and multi-family household units. ...
- Municipal Waste: ...
- Commercial Waste: ...
- Institutional Waste: ...
- Garbage: ...
- Rubbish: ...
- Ashes: ...
- Bulky Wastes:

2. What are the factors that determine the generation rate of solid waste?

Population and gross domestic product (GDP) are the two compelling factors affecting MSW generation. The waste generation per capita is influenced by income level.

3. Why is it important to determine the generation rate of solid waste?

Strong waste age rates gauge the measure of waste made by living arrangements or organizations over a specific measure of time (day, year, and so forth.). Squander age rates for private and business exercises can be utilized to appraise the effect of new advancements on the nearby waste stream.

4. How can you determine the composition of solid waste?

Physical structure is tried by taking waste example. Synthetic organization is tried by taking soil test from dumpsite territory. The dirt is the final result of strong waste which is unloaded previously. Leachate attributes are tried by taking leachate from the channel close to the dumpsite of chose territory.

5. What are factors that determine the generation rate of solid waste?

Populace and (GDP) are the two convincing elements influencing MSW age. The waste age per capita is affected by salary level. High salary bunch produce on normal 1.91 kg/capita/day, center pay bunch creates 1.01 kg/capita/day and low pay bunch 0.92 kg/capita/day.