

The artist uses unity and variety in his painting by adding color and the way he titles them. He also uses geometric shapes, flat areas and colors that makes his images different. He reflects his artwork on racism and many more things. He also shows the separation between white's and African Americans by painting the white's on the left and african americans on the right. He also repeated the use of red in a variety of shapes.