

Kayla Brabham

ENG 132-02

What Determines police brutality and what is the protocol for determining the consequences of misconduct actions? Depending on who you ask you may receive different incite on these topics. Often times, as soon as you approach the subject police brutality everyone says people of color are always being killed by police. This is obvious, everyone knows that. We always see police being able to walk away clean with no charges behind a lot of these incidents. What we don't have clear answers to is what determines police brutality and its consequences after. How would police brutality occur if they were following proper training protocols? Maybe it's a lack of training in certain areas that must deal with certain situations. Every encounter with certain types of civilian