

LEADERSHIP IN HEALTH SERVICES
Journal Review

Beverly Elliott

Theological Research and Writing 613

Beulah Heights University

Fall 2017

Choose a scholarly article and find an article in it to discuss. Leadership Journal 2014-2015.

Leadership in Health Services
Emerald Insights

Table Of Contents: Volume 8 Issue 6

Published: 2014, Start page: 351 Special Issue: Teaching, education and training

Involving people with intellectual disabilities in the assessment of healthcare professionals

Keywords:

Training, Assessment, Intellectual disabilities, Simulated patient, Healthcare, Professionals

Publisher:

Emerald Group Publishing Limited

Copyright:

© Emerald Group Publishing Limited 2014

Published by Emerald Group Publishing Limited

What resonated with you?

What resonated with me was that the purpose of the paper was clear, simple and distinct. It was good to see that health care professionals in leadership are concerned with the discrimination between intellectual disabilities and those who are non-disabled. The authors were careful to define the problems and structure simulated patients (which were played by actors) to take part in this assessment process.

What didn't?

The findings of this entire process did not resonate with me. It seems if no real difference in bringing out the issue changed significantly.

Why?

It seemed as if this complex problem, though stated very clearly and distinctly and they appeared to change in terms of their knowledge and attitudes, but I am not sure the entire system with regard to discrimination has changed or caught up and equaled the knowledge of the problem. It seems as if they needed to go deeper into this area of discrimination of intellectual disabilities as noted that results show there is still little in the way of literature on this subject. Still few institutions employ actors with 'intellectual disabilities' as part of their training programs.