

My Mother never worked.

I'm not clear on what my assignment is, and How can I write 6 to 8 hundred words on this topic other than parrot phrasing what I have read. I will say this! The essay enraged me to read how long and hard this woman worked without any recognition and only to hear the words "your Mother never worked, WOW! This all started in 1918 and continued for I guess it would be safe to say her entire life. This poor lady started out working in a general store, which she single handedly managed by herself full time. could she have not been compensated for that one job alone? It didn't even state who own that business or whether she worked for herself. Furthermore, it doesn't matter whom owned the store, I'm sure taxes had to be paid on it and the items sold there. Therefore, I believe a social security status should have been possible.

Ms martha was 26 years old when she truly started working very hard. In a farming industry never the less. And again it does not state whom she was working for. Although this essay was very narrative some major points were left out, which could have assisted Mrs martha in being eligible for benefits. Correct me if I'm wrong, but when you're talking " MONEY " no details should ever be left out or omitted. My anger comes from whom ever Mrs martha worked for, be it an organization or her husband and family members. Starting from 1921 up until she had passed away she'd worked extremely hard, not to mention part of that time she was in a wheel chair. The author of this essay may have mentioned maybe twice that she had help from two of her sons, but this was close to when her life was expiring.

By Bonnie Smith. To be cont...