

Student Journal #2

Min Gu Cho

ATH 473 Internship

September 12, 2018

Professor Brian Keith Hodges

I have come to think of whether it is right to settle a new believer in this time, or to help others to think truthfully. Here I share three things. Should we not explain our church? Do I have to give my testimony? And should I not give advice when I hear these people's testimonies? I thought of this.

First, should we not explain our church? When I first talked about it, I directly gave my church a new believer to people and explained it first and gave life to the denomination. After the end of the fifth week, a total of four people were settled. So I asked what it was like. One said it was just so, the two were a little wonder and the one was not. So I think it is very important to talk about Jesus rather than the story of the church. I thought that it was necessary to explain what God wanted from the vision of the church and how it was built in our church.

Second, should I not give my testimony? All four of you listened to my story and thought a lot, and I felt what God I believed was a God. And it was amazing how God I believed worked. I showed my life and my life God led me to say that it was very helpful to have four people in our church. They said that they felt that my God was really alive.

Third, should I not give advice when I hear these people's testimonies? I listened to these people's stories, kept listening and kept on reacting. And at the end, God's work gave me only words and words that were amazing. Those people appreciate it and think more seriously, and I do not advise them, but they say that they have changed a lot.

I have been thinking a lot while studying these three things, and this experience seems to change my life. I want to change a lot as I live and want to change my life a lot. Therefore, I want to go to God more and this experience wants to save many souls. Lastly, except for the first of these three, the two of them were so popular that many people liked it. So I think the first is another way and I need to study more.