

My Personal Communication Style is, I'm an Extravert, the positive side of my style is as the book said, I'm a very social types who can easily start a conversation with strangers, I have been told that I know no strangers. It is easy for me to have fun and get along well with others. Sometimes I dominate the conversation. That is my positive side of being an Extravert.

Now my negative side is also that I dominate the conversation. I have been told that I have a hard time listening and by not listening, I have put my foot in my mouth many times. If there is a conflict I tend to act, also if an argument happens, I'm the one to try to have the last word.

I resolved a conflict one time, as a supervisor, I was sent to this maintenance shop and this shop was very hostile to management. No body was speaking to each other in a servile manner. I come into this shop with my Extravert style and solve many problems by talking and acting, this was positive though. Because, many problems were solved by me, (not bragging) that I was labeled "supervisor friendly"
