

The Most Important Ingredient of Leadership

The most important ingredient of leadership is integrity. Integrity is a quality of being complete and authentic in other words being able to synchronize your private life with your public life.

Once it's lost, you've lost the basis of leadership. If you come on air and have a posture of integrity and being uncompromisingly honest, it must show in everything you do otherwise nobody will trust you.

One of the examples from the Bible I believe demonstrates this important ingredient is Joseph the son of Jacob, he was able to balance his public and private life while in the house of Potiphar and while in jail. He demonstrated that it doesn't matter your circumstances, you must maintain your integrity to the end because there is a reward or not. Talking of reward, the three young men Shadrack Meshack and Abednego stood and confronted a pagan king that even if God does not deliver them they were not going to bow down before the statue.
