

Leadership is a relationship between leaders and followers. A complete picture of leadership can be developed only if you ask followers what they look for and admire in a leader. The most significant contribution that leaders make is not simply today's bottom line. It is to be the long term development of people and institutions so that they can adapt, change, prosper and grow. Leadership is important, not just in your career and within your organization in every community and in every country, we need more exemplary leaders and we need them more than ever. There is so much extraordinary work which can be done. We need leaders who can unite us and ignite us to do the best. A leader is fearless and it is exactly that kind of spirit that fueled extraordinary and willingness to take risks. A leader should not run away from pains, but rather, the leader should grow with pains.