

Teratogens, FAS, NOWS
Class Preparation
Nursing 201: Nursing Care of Special Populations

1. Teratogens cause less harm in the first trimester because the fetus is so small.

TRUEFALSE
2. Smoke exposure in utero increases newborns risk of asthma and ear infections.

TRUEFALSE
3. Severity of newborn withdrawal symptoms is affected by the type of substance used.

TRUEFALSE
4. A neonatal toxicology test of meconium can identify exposure to teratogens.

TRUEFALSE
5. Medications can be prescribed to manage newborns suffering from neonatal withdrawal.

TRUEFALSE
6. When caring for a newborn in withdrawal the nurse can use a pacifier, swaddling, and dim lighting to soothe.

TRUEFALSE
7. There is no objective form of measurement to assess a newborn's severity of withdrawal.

TRUEFALSE
8. Identify the facial features that this child with FAS possesses.

__thin upper lip____

__small eye openings____

__smooth area between nose and upper lip