

Project 3.1.5 Animal Welfare and Me

Purpose

There are federal regulations, state laws, ethical guidelines, and personal beliefs that define and govern the humane and correct use of animals. These regulations and guidelines are there to protect animals from being subjected to cruel and harmful treatment.

In this lesson, you have discussed the differences in how people value animals and how perceptions may alter a person's opinion. It is easy for someone to say he or she cares about animals. Many people believe animals should be treated humanely. In the practice of animal sciences, what does that really mean? In this project, you will probe the question of how you will treat animals on a daily basis.

Materials

Per student:

- Article pertaining to animal abuse
- Computer with word processing software
- Pencil
- Agriscience Notebook

Procedure

In this project, you will start by reviewing an article of possible animal abuse that will be provided by your teacher. After reviewing the article, you will develop a Producer's Code of Care guide to be used in your Producer's Management Guide.

Part One – Reading About Animal Abuse

1. Read the article provided by your teacher.
2. Identify areas where you feel the animal could have been treated more humanely.
3. In the margins, record how you would have handled the situation differently.

Part Two – Developing Your Code of Care

1. Develop a standard of care that you will provide for your animal in your Producer's Management Guide.
2. Think of areas in which you can improve or guarantee the quality of life for your animal.
3. Below are suggested areas to include in your Producer's Code of Care, but you are not limited to these areas. Consider additional areas unique to your animal and include those based on your experiences in this course.
 - Provisions for feed, water, and habitat
 - Health care and expectations
 - Handling procedures or expectations
 - Transportation and harvesting practices
 - Use in education and research

- Demonstrating and promoting a positive perception of animal agriculture
4. Using a computer with word processing software, develop your Producer's Code of Care document.
 5. This document will be included in your Producer's Management Guide. Include the following components.
 - Title
 - Brief introduction
 - Care guidelines
 - Citation of any sources you used in APA format
 6. Review Project 3.1.5 Evaluation Rubric for additional requirements.

Conclusion

1. In the article you read, identify and record two areas of questionable animal use. How would you suggest the producer handle a similar situation?

They should always take care of their animals and treat them as their own child.

2. How has developing a Producer's Code of Care guide helped you think about becoming a better producer?

They helped me become a better animal lover and care for my animals.

7. What factors are taken into consideration when caring for an animal?
You should always care for them and make sure they are healthy.

PitBulls

Why are pitbulls being treated horribly by other human being? Human beings are scared and have a wrong understanding of them. They only think that they are dangerous and will bite and maybe even kill them. In my opinion if you treat them the way you want to be treated everything will be okay. They are just like humans, they bleed the same blood we bleed. Pit Bulls have great physical and mental characteristics that make them excellent partners for responsible, active, and caring owners. On the other hand, these same outstanding qualities can make them a little difficult to handle for people who don't have a lot of experience with dog ownership or for those who don't understand the breed very well. They are very affectionate and loving dogs. Pits are great cuddlers who appreciate their owner's attention and approval more than anything.

Pit bulls are commonly confident, people-oriented dogs that can develop a strong sense of dependence on their humans. Caring for a pit bull requires an extremely responsible person. Because of their affectionate but dependent natures, it is particularly important to provide balance with Cesar's fulfillment formula, making sure that they have plenty of exercise and discipline before they receive affection.
