

Once upon a time, there lived a droplet of water. The water droplet was going through a continuous cycle, the water cycle. There are many adventures in the water cycle. The water cycle may be one big circle, but the adventure is different every time. In its most recent adventure, the water droplet went on an adventure through Fruitvale. The water droplet started off in the city's water well, located in the middle of town.

One day, the Honest Diner, located in the mountains north of town, needed water. The water droplet, along with many of its fellow water droplets were pumped up the well, which led them to the diner. Later that day, employees from the diner poured the bottles into a pitcher of water. The water droplet was then poured into a glass, and served to a customer. The customer, however, spilled the water, while they were outside on the Honest Diner's porch. They pushed the water off the porch and into the snow.

The droplet of water turned into snow. The water droplet was snow for awhile, but a criminal burned the Honest Diner down, and the snow turned into water again. The water ran down the mountain and ended up in the creek. In the creek, there lived a family of crawfish. One of the baby crawfish swallowed the water droplet. Then, there were some people catching crawfish and the baby crawfish was caught. The water droplet traveled inside the crawfish into the town of Fruitvale.

While in Fruitvale, one of the men noticed that the baby crawfish had a lot of water inside of it. They shook the water out and the water droplet landed on the cement. It was so hot that day, that the water was evaporated into the atmosphere, and it made its way up into the clouds. It was a really windy day, and the droplet was inside the cloud when it went back to the mountains north of Fruitvale. There it became a frozen ice crystal in the clouds. Since it was a windy day, the cloud got pushed back the other direction. The water inside the cloud melted because it was still hot in Fruitvale.

In the town of Fruitvale, it began to mist. In the mist was the droplet of water. It was still windy outside. The mist was being blown all around in the town of Fruitvale. The water droplet landed inside of the city well. The water droplet started out where it began, this time.

Amy didn't find any errors.