

The Tragic End to Fruitvale

Fruitvale was an amazing little town filled with the most cheerful community until tragedy hit! Through a very intense investigation, a conclusion was found, on how Fruitvale came to a tragic end.

It all began on a normal day in Aunt Mae's garden. Aunt Mae was watering her massive garden with over 20 different kinds of fruits and vegetables! All of Aunt Mae's water comes from the Fruitvale Reservoir which holds over a million gallons of water for the Fruitvale Valley! Aunt Mae is watering her huge backyard garden and the water from her hose stays on the leaves of all of her award winning plants. This is where it all began.

The next day when the sun comes up all of the droplets left in her garden begin to evaporate. Near Fruitvale there is a mountain chain called the Bear Mountains. The Bear Mountains had a huge storm the day before and the storm is headed straight for Fruitvale. The breeze from the storm is bringing in lots of vapor into the air which is causing more droplets on the plants and objects in town. The storm turns into a massive snowstorm which covers the entire town in a thick blanket of pure white snow.

On the North side of Fruitvale there is the Fruitvale Sanitation Plant. The sanitation plant has been shut down for three years and has turned in to the high school "hangout spot." Kids from both high schools in town go there to hang out with their friends on the weekends which has caused the entire plant to become a dump. This is due to high school kids not picking up after themselves. The snow storm covered all of the plant and Fruitvale which then caused flooding in the whole town!

The flooding cause the drains to clog with trash from around town and from the sanitation plant. The rivers are full and flowing into town and houses. The flooding picked up a deadly bacteria, E Coli! The only diner in town that is not flooded is called Honest Diner. The Honest Diner is not so honest because they were serving everyone in town water from the flood! "There's plenty of water outside so why pay for water!" says the owner. The water was had the bacteria in it and the WHOLE TOWN drank it! Since the whole town drank it they were all sick so no one had any energy to help one another so they all died.