

One upon a time, a dark menacing cloud flew over the town of Fruitvale and it started to rain. While it was raining a dog named Jo Jo was panting because she got done running around. While she was panting a raindrop hit the glands of her tongue. After that she had sneezed and the raindrop flew out of her mouth and onto the ground.

When it had hit the ground it went underground and fell in between two grains of sand 10 meters underground. While it was sitting in between the grains of sand it was starting to get warm so it then evaporated back into the giant rain cloud. and it rained down again but this time it had landed in a birdbath in Marge's backyard.

After the rain had went away a bird came along and took a bath in the bird bath. The bird took a very long bath to where he was dripping wet. After the bird was done he flew back into the mountains with the raindrop still on him.

The raindrop stayed on the bird when he left. When he had gotten to the top of the mountain the raindrop had turned into a snowflake because it was cold on the mountain. Suddenly the snowflake fell off the bird and floated back down to the town of Fruitvale.

When the snowflake made it to Fruitvale it had melted back into a raindrop. After a while of the raindrop sitting on the ground it started going underground. When it went underground it rested on a layer of sand underneath the town of Fruitvale. The raindrop will remain there until something else happens to it.