

Stanley's story

By: TJ Rich

*I*t's dark underground and very warm, Stanley likes it this way, the ground continued to get warmer, eventually it got so hot that Stanley evaporated, became gas and floated into the great blue sky. Now it's get colder and colder to the point that it freezes, Stanley begins to crystallize into a beautiful snowflake and falls to the top of a mountain.

Harsh winds begin to circle around the mountain destroying Stanley's newly built home casting The Neighborhood (The Snow) down to Aunt Marge's Garden. The beautiful flowers absorb Stanley as he begins to melt on the warm ground. Stanley then traveled up the stem of the flower and in the leaf he had found his new home.

A great fog came over the garden one night and as Stanley came out of the leaf to see what was happening a strong breeze blew the fog away taking Stanley with it. As the morning came and got warmer the fog evaporated and turned into a gas as well as Stanley.

Stanley began to freeze again but not as much as last time just enough to take form as water, he notices some of his friends a few feet away and they begin to gather, eventually Stanley realised that there was a huge crowd (Stormcloud) and everyone was so loud (Thunder) that some of his friends began to leave and he asks one of them, "Were are you going?" the friend replied, "We're going to Eat em' up berry farm. Would you like to join us?" Stanley had never been to Eat em' up Farm before so he thought why not, this crowd was too big anyway and frankly a little scary because as soon as stanley left the bolt family showed up (Lightning Bolts).

Stanley fell to the Earth hitting a tree leaf, bush leaves, and plopped down to the ground after slipping off of a berry. After seeping into the ground he realised he was finally back where he had started, he was underground, it was dark, and it was warm. :"} }