Disclaimers

- Use, description or example of any product or brand in this course is for education purposes only, and does not indicate endorsement of that product.

- Product examples are used to represent a category of products, of which there are numerous types that frequently change.

- It is up to the individual clinician to assess the patient and determine which product is most appropriate for a particular patient, wound, and situation.

- Each WOC clinician should follow his/her own organizational policies to set up a wound care product formulary based on the needs of that specific patient population.

Cleveland Clinic