

At a young age I began to admire and respect nurses. I feel nurses are very knowledgeable, loving and courageous. I have always enjoyed working with the community and have worked in the mental health field for many years. I truly enjoy helping others and want to give back. When my sister became ill with cancer, I saw firsthand how important nurses truly are. My sister was very blessed to have had the most caring, loving and strong nurses. This is where my passion to one day become a nurse came from. I hope to be as loving and caring as the nurses who cared for my sister.
