

Why Nursing?

My whole life I have been drawn to helping others in any way that I could. I think one big reason for that is the influence that my big brother has always had on me. My brother has a disability known as Williams Syndrome and it is because of that disability that he never meets a stranger. So, thanks to my brother, I grew up knowing to have a big heart for all those around me, stranger or not. With every person I have had the opportunity to take care of, I have felt an extreme sense of pride and honor. Having the ability to extend a caring hand to those who need it the most is what makes me confident in my decision to pursue nursing.
