To be honest, nursing was not my initial plan of career that I want to pursue. I have always wanted to be a lawyer and I still dream of becoming one. I have finished a Bachelor of Arts in Philosophy from the Philippines and was already in my first year in law school when we had to move to the United States since my mom, as a registered nurse, got a job contract here. To cut the story short, I had to give up my dream of becoming a lawyer and choose another career that will help me thrive and become successful here in the US that is why I choose to become a nurse. Nursing, as everyone knows, is not an easy career but by perseverance and dedication, anyone can become successful. Moreover, I would also like to challenge myself since nursing is far much different from the trainings I have had my entire college life – as a philosophy student and as a law student. Who knows? I might continue to pursue my dream of becoming a lawyer once I am already a nurse.
