

Why do I want to be a nurse?

I am returning to school to become a nurse after graduating from graduate school a couple years ago and working a few different jobs, none of which I was very satisfied with. Both of my parents work in the nursing field, so I have grown up wanting to work in the medical field. Originally, I wanted to pursue a medical degree and become a physician. However, after speaking with several doctors and shadowing with them in their practice most of them told me they would not become a doctor if they could do it over again. When speaking with nurses all of them said how much they enjoyed and got satisfaction out of their career. I believe that I can have a very rewarding career as well as be there for people during some of their hardest times in life.
