

Why Do You Want To Be A Nurse?

When I was younger, there were many things that I wanted to be growing up. I wanted to be a police officer, a baker, a teacher, but one thing that never left my mind throughout the years was to be a nurse. I have many people in my family that work in health care and I wanted to be just like them. Most people in this world have the desire to help others. I want to be that one person that has a positive impact in someone's life. I want to one day make a difference in health care and makes things better for everyone and in my rural community. I want to educate others on important topics, especially those that are not able to get the resources that they need. I want to care for others in all aspects, physically, emotionally, mentally and spiritually. I hope one day I can achieve all of these goals I have for myself, while serving others to the best of my ability.