

The reason I chose nursing is, I was a certified dialysis technician for over twenty-six years and discovered my hands were tied as to what I could perform or assist a patient as far as my certification would allow me. I became an LVN and discovered this too my abilities were limited as well. I truly enjoy nursing and learn something new every day. My goal is to be able to broaden boundaries, learn more, and encourage others they can do the same as I am, even if nursing is not their idea of a career. Everyone can obtain their goals if they just “do what they don’t want to do to get to where they want to be”, nothing is given, it is earned.
