

Becoming a nurse has always been a dream of mine because I want to make a difference in people's lives through my care. Not only do I love taking care of people but I also want to inspire them to be the best version of themselves. Being a good nurse requires establishing relationships with patients everyday. I want to provide the best care possible while also building trust with my patients so they feel safe and understood. My hope with all my patients is that I will show them such a high quality level of care that they will reflect that on people they encounter later on.
