Why Nursing?

I have always been naturally caring and I just gravitate to taking care of people when they are hurt or sick. I knew I wanted to be a nurse when I witnessed a motor cycle wreck. My mind was thinking of how bad I wanted to help him, wondering what kind of injuries he experienced internally, and what is going to happen at the hospital and is he going to be okay. I felt so helpless. So, my why of being a nurse is because I genuinely want to help these people when they are in a horrible state of condition. God has given me the ability to pursue such a great career. The rewarding nature of the job is enough in itself. I want to be that person to help take care of those people who end up in wrecks or any time of illness. I want to know how they are doing and see them get better.
