

SIM today was fun and kept me thinking critically during my time there. I enjoyed the game because not only was it fun but it made me apply my knowledge that I have gained over the duration of IM3. My favorite part was even though we were correct, the instructors made us think deeper and more critically about each scenario which in the end makes us better nurses. The part I think I benefitted most from was the SBAR scenario and talking to the "dr". We do not necessarily get much training on how to properly address the doctors when we have to call them so getting to do that and understand what it is really like helps me. I am soft and on the emotional side of things which helps me be compassionate and care deeply for my patients but that was a teaching moment for me to know when to have thick skin and when to be normal Sydney. I learn visually and by being hands on so games like this really help me engage and apply things that I have been taught as well as learning from my mistakes and how to correct them.
