

To start, I didn't I didn't always know I wanted to be a nurse. That decision came later for me after some college and finding myself. I decided I wanted to be a nurse after some shadowing I had done. I worked for a local vet clinic and saw a large amount of emergencies and generalized practice. I naturally found myself drawn toward emergency medicine and began thriving in that environment. That led me towards human medicine and exploring my options to help others. Due to stressful environments being something I drifted towards I started looking into being a nurse, I completed quite a bit of hospital shadowing and fell in love. I know the path forward is anything but easy, but I'm willing to put my heart and soul into helping others during some of the hardest times in their lives. That is the reason I want to be a nurse.
