I want to be a nurse because I have always been drawn towards healthcare. I want to be able to help people and comfort them on their worst days. I was inspired to go specifically into nursing by some great nurses who crossed my path a couple years ago. They came into my family's life during a tough time, and they were so very patient, compassionate, and kind. I learned a lot about nursing from them, as well how I wanted to impact people's lives. Healthcare is such a hard field, but I think hospitals need more nurses like those that inspired me.
