

1. What type of person do you feel more comfortable with?

I would feel more comfortable with a women. I feel that I would better understand a women if she is feeling uncomfortable. I would be able to comfort women in a better way since I am a women myself.

2. Do you think you may feel more compassion toward a patient with a heart condition or cancer or a patient with a sexually transmitted disease?

I would like to be compassionate towards all patients. I would not pick and choose who to be more compassionate to. It is our duty as healthcare providers to be compassionate towards every patient no matter what their condition is. I hope to help every patient overcome any medical issue.

3. How do you feel you would interact with a morbidly obese patient compared to one of the average stature?

Caring for a morbidly obese patient would more than likely be difficult but I would like to treat them like any other patient. Obese patients are more than likely embarrassed of their weight so I would like to try and make them feel comfortable as much as possible. However, caring for an average stature patient would be easily done with no concerns.

4. Who would you rather work with, a physically disabled patient or a mentally disabled patient?

I would work with both physically and mentally disabled patients. Sometimes both patients are not able to help with their circumstances. It could be hereditary or it could be something that occurred over the years.
