

Chad Miller

Critical Thinking Exercise #2

Sandy's actions were wrong because she was not acting in a professional manner. No discussion should have taken place in the cafeteria because it involved visitors and employees that were not involved with the patient. Furthermore, Sandy used specific names and revealed not only the reason for the patient's visit but made assumptions about the patient.

Sandy was in violation of the ARRT Code of ethics by acting unprofessional and denying the patient's rights, including a right to privacy.

Sandy made public statements that could damage the patient's public image and could face slander litigation.
