Midterm Reflection

I am doing my preceptorship at South 10, and so far, it has been going well. The nurses on the floor, the people I work with, especially my preceptor, are amazing people to work with. I feel welcomed and invited to their floor every time I'm there, even as a Nurse Tech. I feel that I am learning a lot as a student nurse whose about to graduate from nursing school, especially today. Today was my 6th day working with my preceptor and I was handling 3 patients. We were discharging 3 patients and getting 2 admits. Throughout the busyness of the day, I felt tired and accomplished, that we did everything that we could, and that we helped each other out. The good thing about the floor is the teamwork and the professionalism that everyone has. I have heard numerous rumors about other floors where they can "feel" the drama and everything. On this floor, it's about work and teamwork. The only bad thing that I can say is that we are short-staffed, especially on the nurse aides and registered nurses. If I can look back, comparing myself to the other days that I was following, is that I need to improve on my time management skills and try to absorb more information. I also could've tried different ways on how to do things because they always said that you can do things differently, if it works, it works, but in a good and safe way. Overall thoughts for the past 5 days, is that it has been a blast. It was difficult, especially today, and even if I had experience as a tech, it is still a challenge. I can't wait to do more and improve on my skills.
