

When I think about the reason, I want to be a nurse many things come to mind. I would like to share two of those reasons. The first is that I want to follow in my grandmother's footsteps. Growing up, I observed not only the person my grandmother was but also the amazing nurse she was. The compassion my grandmother showed towards her patients and truly to anyone she met was just inspiring. I knew that I wanted to be just like her. The second reason is that I have always wanted to make a difference in the lives of others, and I feel that I could do that best by caring for others who may not be able to care for themselves. Truthfully, the only thing that I have ever felt that I was "good" at doing, was caring for others. Putting the needs of others before my own and seeing the impact that I can make brings just an overwhelming sensation that is so hard to explain, I just know that I could not imagine doing anything else with my life.