

I was excited about this simulation escape room nursing experience because it is a fun game that requires you to critically think and work together with a group of people. Which is exactly what we are expected and should be doing now as current nursing students and as future nurses, to be able to critically think and work together as a team. Although I have shared a classroom with my peers for an entire module and the previous module I have yet to meet every single student personally, so seeing who was in my group for this simulation made me a little nervous because I have not shared a rotation/SIMs with 3 of the students and have no idea of who they are, what their personality looks like and if they are willing to work as a team. Which again leads me to the same conclusion I had before, it all comes down to critical thinking and be able to work together with a group of people regardless of knowing them or not. I enjoyed being part of their group and working together to escape the room, it was a great fun learning experience.
