

When I think of nursing I think of my Nanny. Born in England, she was part of the Royal Air Force as a nurse. Her compassion and desire to help people is what pushed me to become a nurse. I have been an LVN for almost ten years and have worked all different specialties. One thing remains unchanged over the years... my desire to help people in their hardest or most difficult moments of their life. This opportunity to get my RN will help me reach more people and show the same compassion that my Nanny showed to her patients, friends and family.
