

Why do I want to be a nurse?

I knew I wanted to be a nurse since I was a little kid being dragged into the doctor's office by my mother, to get those yearly shots that everyone loves. At first, I didn't understand why I was getting jabbed majority of the time when my mother told my brother and I that we get to see the Dr. We would try so hard to convince her we were just fine if it meant we did have to see the guy in the white coat. She said it was going to keep us safe and alive. As I got older, I started to take an interest in the people that would come talk to me before the Dr. came in. I was understanding how they were a big part of these visits to make sure I was doing well. We get asked the question, "what do you want to be when you're older?" The first thing that came to me was a nurse. It wasn't till high school that I found out there were various ways a nurse could be in. From there I started to explore more into the medical field of nursing, I then took classes that taught medical terminology and went a step closer to wanting to be a nurse. Since then, I've wanted to help people in need. I'm excited for where this new path is going to take me.
