

Choosing a career built around caring for others has always resonated with me. I have always gravitated toward the medical field but never knew which path to take. When I started working in Nursing Support Services at UMC I had the opportunity to be exposed to the world of nursing daily. What drew me to the idea of pursuing nursing as a career was witnessing the ability to lift the spirits of critical patients and their families all while providing the best care possible. What made me register for classes was specifically observing how well the nursing staff on one of my units performed a code blue. Everyone knew their role, and everyone worked like one machine. It was then that I decided to go to school and pursue nursing.
