

LaShunda Evans

Nursing is more than a career; it is a calling. I have always had a strong desire to care for those who are less fortunate or unable to care for themselves. I want to be a nurse to serve others and make a difference through compassion, education, and care. I am passionate about advocating for those who may lack the knowledge or ability to speak on their own behalf. As a Nurse, when entrusted with the well-being of those who are vulnerable or experiencing life changing events, I want to ensure they receive the utmost compassion and superior care. Nursing Education and advancement are important to me and the career paths and settings available in the nursing field are limitless making nursing a career that has unlimited possibilities. These are the reasons I want to be a nurse, I can not see myself in any other profession.