

I want to be a nurse because I want to help the ones in need. I want to give hope to the people who have lost it, and I want to see them smile when they start feeling better. I remember when I was younger it would make me smile when my parents recovered from an illness, and I want to give that same smile to others. It felt good watching them receive proper care and attention when they could not help themselves. I want to share that feeling with others in the world. I have witnessed how poorly patients can be treated without proper care, and I would like to do my part in eliminating that kind of poor treatment.
