Additional Comments: Early on, I was excited about this group project. Immediately after we were given our groups and subjects, I made a “group me” with Mya and Tori so we could start brainstorming and communicating. They ended up never responding (I don’t know if it was a technological issue or what.) Several weeks later I was walking in the hallway between breaks and overheard Mya and Tori talking about the project... I went up to them and asked them if they are talking about our project and they said yes and had already chosen the board theme. I was shocked as there had been no communication between all of us about it, but I went along with what they decided. I offered to buy certain supplies for the board and that was agreed upon. Communication the entire time was difficult. Mya and Tori are really close friends and communicate outside of class often. A bulk of their communication was between each other and I was not included. When I would attempt to do something or get information or express ideas, they were turned down and I was essentially told what had been decided. The two dates we had decided to meet, Tori bailed on the first one. On the second date, they agreed to meet during the few hours of the day when I had prior plans. It turned out they made the board on a small poster board and not the larger presentation board. So we were able to separate and I bought the correct presentation board and letters to attach to the board, and we met up and made the new board we presented with. I did my own research on what I spoke about for the presentation, but the overall theme and EBP research, I didn’t have a say in.
