

As cliché as it sounds, I have wanted to be a nurse since I was a child. However, my true love for nursing really started when I was in high school. My senior year of high school, I was given the opportunity to partake in a class that allowed me to spend a semester shadowing different types of nurses at a level one trauma hospital. Since then, I have obtained my Patient Care Technician certification and have worked in both the Trauma and Surgical ICU at University Medical Center, and on a Cardiac Telemetry-Observation MedSurg floor, at Covenant Medical Center. Working in both the ICU and in Medsurg has exposed me to so many different opportunities and things that made me fall in love with nursing even more. I want to be a nurse because I want to make a difference in people's lives, no matter the situation. I want to be the nurse my patients can come to in a time of need and one they can trust to take care of them and their families.
