“Why do you want to be a nurse?” I can no longer count the times I’ve been asked this question or have asked it myself. I want to be in the best position to help people during some of the hardest times of their lives. I want to be a nurse like my great grandma or my aunt. I want to be a nurse like the nurses who helped my mom when she had leukemia. Nurses make an impact on those around them. I want to be a nurse because it is a profession that I can count on to always support my family financially. I want to be a nurse because I never want to be held back by my degree if God makes it clear that we ever need to move. I want to be a nurse because I believe it is the right job for me.
