I want to become a nurse because I have always admired the strength nurses have when caring for their patients. When I was in the hospital during high school, I had a nurse who, no matter how busy she was, took the time to always explain any questions I had regarding the procedure I was going to have and consistently showed compassion when I was at my lowest point. This struck a chord in me wanting to have the same effect on others in their time of need to be a person who can assure and help patients when they are at their lowest. Since then, I have worked in the health field and have seen more nurses in their profession and this has made my love and desire to become a nurse grow more.
