

Why Nursing?

After graduating high school in 2018, I was lost in college because I wasn't sure what my future looked like. I always knew I wanted to work as a healthcare professional but never settled on a specific path. Be it a nursing, cardiologist, orthopedic, anesthesiologist, etc. The choices were abundant, so I took my basics my first year and took a year off school to evaluate and get my life in order. In 2021 I had the idea of getting a taste of what working as a health care professional would be like by getting my CNA certificate where I was then permitted to work under nurses and experience the privilege of witnessing doctors. I was responsible for the well-being and comfortability of others, and it was the most enthusiastic feeling. I was trusted with the life of others; it wasn't regular to me. I saw the nurses as heroes and then began seeing myself as one too. I had done multiple jobs before becoming a nurse aid, but this one was different. I never felt like I was working while at work and that's when I knew it had to be nursing.
