

My aspiration to become a nurse is ultimately about a calling, to treat each patient as I would like to be treated and providing understanding and comfort to patients when they are in their most vulnerable moments. Nursing is vastly diverse and allows one to truly focus on what resonates with his or her interests and values.