

I want to become a nurse because of my passion for serving others, it is something fulfilling, and because the field of nursing is diverse. For instance, my passion for serving others was evident when I was younger, when I always helped care for my grandparents. The sense of fulfillment from helping others recover from illness is also a driving factor in my decision to pursue nursing. Finally, the nursing field is incredibly diverse, allowing for the opportunity to grow in the knowledge of serving others in different ways and pursuing higher education. These examples demonstrate why I want to become a nurse.
