

I, Synthia Gomez, would like to become a nurse to try and bring kindness and show compassion to our community. As it may sound cliché, I want to help people. I feel I have been through times in my life where I wish I had a helping hand to reach out to so, I want to be that hand to give to people. There was a few years ago where I worked at a small clinic in New Mexico, and some medical assistants, or coworkers were judgmental and hasty regarding the patient outside of the intake rooms. I stepped away from that workplace but could not stop reminiscing about the patients who come in vulnerable and looking for answers. I decided to go to school and attempt to be the healthcare worker I personally would like to have.
